BREVARD COLLEGE
BREVARD, NORTH CAROLINA

A Century of Learning

BREVARD College is the result of a merger of Rutherford and Weaver Colleges, on the campus of what was Brevard Institute.

Dr. Robert Laban Abernethy founded Rutherford College in 1850, but its charter was not granted until 1853. This was the first college in the South to admit boys and girls to the same classes. During the time that this institution was in operation, from the 1850's to 1933 with the exception of the Civil War years, Dr. Abernethy and his successors educated 10,000 boys and girls, many of them free of any tuition charges. A large number of the graduates entered the Christian ministry, not only the Methodist ministry here in our own state, but all over the nation. Many have become famous in other lines of endeavor. Among them are college presidents, judges, scientists, surgeons, lawyers, industrialists, and persons in high federal office.

Mr. George F. Ivey, a member of the Board of Trustees of Brevard College, was also a member of the Rutherford College Board. Rutherford's last president, Dr. E. P. Billups, became closely connected with Brevard College during the years that he was pastor of the Methodist Church in Brevard. When Brevard College opened, one member of its faculty, Mr. C. O. Cathey, came to it from the Rutherford College faculty.

Measuring the age of the institutions by the date on which the charter was granted, Rutherford College would be considered the older of the two; but Weaver College had important predecessors before it received its charter.

The first session of the Weaverville School was held in the "Conference House," a building erected for the meeting of the Holston Annual Conference in 1836. A neighborhood school was conducted in this rude structure until it was destroyed by fire in 1854. Then the teaching was carried on in Temperance Hall until it too was burned in 1872.

The section of country benefited by the Weaverville school felt so strongly the need of educational facilities that efforts were put forward at once to construct a new building and to extend the work of the institution. In 1873 the school was incorporated as Weaverville College, under a local Board of Trustees independent of any denomination. Under the administration of Dr. D. Atkins in 1883, the college was deeded to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In 1912 the charter was amended to change the name to Weaver College and to change the institution from a four-year school to a junior college.

Professor C. H. Trowbridge, who was Superintendent of Brevard Institute from 1904 to 1923, became president of Weaver College in 1923 and held this position until the merger of Weaver and Rutherford Colleges in 1933. Besides Mr. Trowbridge, Miss Lucile Smith, Miss Dulcie Hayes and Mr. Wesley Williams, all members of the Weaver College faculty, joined the faculty of the new Brevard College. Mrs. Lee Pylant, who had at one time been Dean of Women at Weaver College, came to Brevard as Dean of Women in 1947. Mrs. C. E. Buckner, former Dean of Brevard College, was a graduate of Weaver.

The Cliosophic and Delphian literary societies, with their sister organizations, the Euterpeans and Mnemosyneans, were also brought to Brevard from Weaver College. Each of these societies has a long and interesting history.

Among the Board of Trustees of Weaver College were Mr. H. A. Dunham, Dr. C. M. Pickens, Judge Guy Weaver, and Rev. H. C. Sprinkle, Sr., all of whom are members of the present Board of Trustees of Brevard College and continue to support the college and its work.

Soon after the Civil War a well-to-do Philadelphian and his wife, who had traveled throughout Europe and visited much of the world, came to the mountains of North Carolina in search of a healthful climate. In 1895 this couple, Mr. and Mrs. Fitch Taylor, started a school for girls in a house near the overhead bridge on West Main Street in Brevard. Because the mountain families distrusted schools and education so much, the first student had to be paid to attend. Soon, however, the Taylors' little cottage became too small for the large number of girls seeking religious training and education. Mr. Taylor bought the Red House on Probarte Street, and added courses for the boys of the community. Again the school outgrew the house, but there was no money for more buildings. Then the Conference Epworth League began helping to support the school, and it became known as the Brevard Epworth School. In 1902 four acres of land were purchased; and West Hall, which was first named Taylor Hall, was begun. The income was not sufficient to complete the building, so the school was discontinued.

In the spring of 1903 a committee of three women went to Atlanta to the conference of the Woman's Home Mission Board of the Southern Methodist Church to ask for help. Miss Belle Bennett, president of the Home Mission Board, came to Brevard to investigate the school and to find a principal. As a result, Brevard Industrial Institute opened its doors in October of 1904 under the direction of Mr. E. E. Bishop. Mr. Bishop went to Thomasville, Georgia, to start a new school in 1904; and Mr. C. H. Trowbridge became the principal of Brevard Institute. Mr. Trowbridge held this position for sixteen years, during which time one hundred acres of land were bought, and the administration building and Ross Hall were built; the old Taylor Hall, later to be renamed West Hall, was brick veneered. After Mr. Trowbridge went to Weaver College, the Institute had three other principals. One of these was Mr. Oliver Orr, now of Brevard; the others were Mr. J. F. Winton and Miss Catherine Ritter. In 1933 Brevard Institute was consolidated with Vashti School, at Thomasville, Georgia; and the buildings and grounds were left in the care of Mr. D. Guy Dean, who is still a resident of Brevard and who now has a daughter at Brevard College. These buildings remained unused until the opening of Brevard College in the fall of 1934.

Mrs. Myrtle Baber Young, at present a house counselor at Brevard College, was a student at Brevard Institute and later returned as nurse and teacher of home economics. Mr. Herman White, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds at Brevard College, was also a student at Brevard Institute. Before going to Weaver College, Miss Lucile Smith taught at Brevard Institute for three years.

In 1933 the Western North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church decided to merge Rutherford College and Weaver College and form a new institution at Brevard. On March 5, 1934, the Board of Trustees appointed by the Western North Carolina Conference, elected Dr. E. J. Coltrane, then on the National Committee of Education, to be the president of Brevard College; and Brevard was opened in September, 1934.

In founding this new junior college, the Western North Carolina Conference had two definite ideals in mind. The first is the Christian ideal. At Weaver and Rutherford Colleges much emphasis was placed on Christian education; and as their successor, Brevard College is pledged to the continuance of that tradition. The self-help plan is the second ideal. Taking into account the large number of boys and girls desiring a college education but financially unable to attend the existing institutions, the special Conference Educational Commission in 1933 recommended that Brevard College be conducted as a self-help junior college and that provision be made for participation of the students in various phases of farming and industry. For a number of years the college owned and operated a farm and a dairy, and every student was required to do a certain task each day. Then so many students began applying who did not need financial assistance that provision had to be made for only a rather limited number of self-help students, and the farm and dairy were discontinued.

During the administration of Dr. Coltrane, from the opening of the institution in 1934 until June 1950, Brevard College greatly expanded its physical plant, its program of instruction, and its faculty. West Hall, Taylor Hall, Ross Hall, and Spencer Hall—later renamed Dunham Hall in honor of Mr. H. A. Dunham of Asheville—all Brevard Institute buildings, were given to Brevard College by the Methodist Conference. The farm buildings were given by friends of the college who were interested in agriculture. The rock wall around the athletic field was constructed by the WPA, and a frame building to be used as a gymnasium was given by Mr. H. A. Dunham. A temporary science building, cafeteria, and several housing units for men have been erected to help meet the needs of the college. The James Addison Jones Library, dedicated on April 10, 1948, is a fireproof building which contains approximately 42,000 volumes. The Mary Frances Stamey Memorial Infirmary, dedicated on July 10, 1948, is also a fireproof structure, of the same architectural design as the library. It was given by the Stamey family in memory of their daughter, who was a student at Brevard College.

During the years new courses of instruction have been added, and the faculty has been increased to meet the growing needs of the students. In December of 1949 Brevard College was fully accredited by the Southern Association and the University Senate. This makes it possible for Brevard graduates to transfer to senior colleges and universities without difficulty.

In June, 1950, President Coltrane was succeeded by Reverend George Brinkmann Ehlhardt, who came to Brevard from the faculty of Duke University. The present administrator has entered upon his duties with a new outlook, a fresh enthusiasm, and a constructive vigor which augur well for the future of the College.

—Betsy Bowman Robinson.

Dedication

To Miss Craig, our "Lady of the Hour," who is the culmination of the best in instruction, friendship, and understanding. We dedicate this 1951 Pertelote.

She has given the means as well as the inspiration to many, and to each of us a word of praise from her is a goal to be won.

The Tornadoes

The 1950 Season

The Brevard Tornadoes coached by Bob Andrews and Bob Swicegood, even though handicapped by injuries throughout the season, made a creditable showing in the Carolina's Junior College Conference competition. The Tornadoes' record for the 1950 season was three games won, four games lost, and one tied.

The Tornadoes opened the season with a thrilling 14 to 13 victory over Presbyterian Junior College. The margin of victory came from perfect placements after touchdowns.

The Tornadoes next traveled to Banner Elk, where they played the fine Lees-McRae team. The conference champions rolled over Brevard 61 to 0.

Brevard broke back into the win column against the Blue Ridge School for Boys. This game was played in the rain and mud at Hendersonville. The final score was Brevard 22 and Blue Ridge 0.

The Tornadoes then played Gardner-Webb at Brevard. The "T" was too powerful for the Tornadoes, as Gardner-Webb downed them 39 to 0.

The following week at Hendersonville the Black Widows of North Greenville scored in the final two minutes of play to knot the score at 19 all. The placement was good. Final score was North Greenville 20 and Brevard 19.

The Tornadoes traveled up to Cullowhee and played the strong WCTC "B" team. The Catamounts scored three touchdowns and one extra point to win 19 to 0.

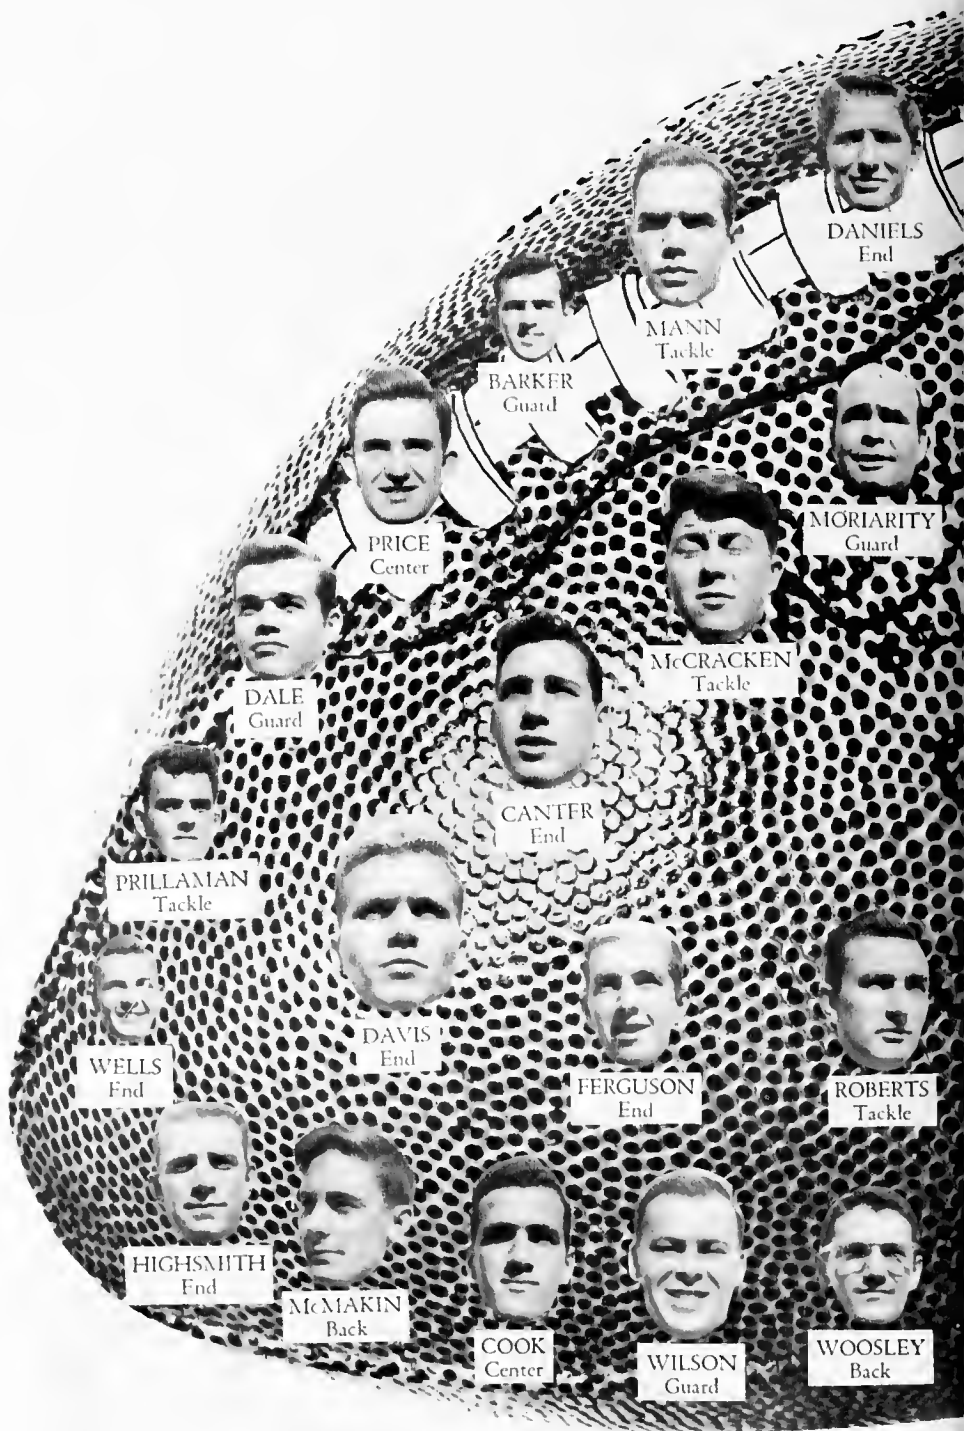

The Blue and White took the field as underdogs to the strong eleven from West Georgia. The Tornadoes, playing their best game of the year, edged the West Georgia squad 7 to 6. Again it was a perfect placement that gave Brevard its victory.

On Thanksgiving Day the rival game between Mars Hill and Brevard was played. Both teams showed some very fine offensive plays but were unable to connect for a touchdown. The final score of this game was the Lions of Mars Hill 0 and the Brevard Tornadoes 0.

BASKETBALL

The Brevard College Basketball Team with six returning lettermen had high hopes of being a kingpin in the Carolinas Junior College Conference this year. After playing only one conference game, a number of the group decided they would join a team that plays a different brand of ball. They joined the undefeated team of the United States Armed Forces.

The Tornadoes, even though losing most of their players to the greatest team in the world, continued on their rugged schedule with the services of only one letterman. They tried many combinations but were still unable to produce a quintet powerful enough to keep the pace with the fast, high-scoring teams of the conference.

At the completion of the season the members of the squad were Joe Hipp, Joe Jack Wells, Bernie Welch, Ansel McMakin, James Dillard, Bill Mainous, Larry Poteat, Ben Steele, James Barker, Reid Gilbert, Bob Peele, and Tommy Caldwell.

Women's Athletics

The Woman's Athletic Association has progressed very much this year, in participation in the various activities on the campus, under the direction of the Physical Education teacher, Miss Louise Moseley, of Gafney, South Carolina. One of the newly organized sports is a girls' basketball team. It has been very successful thus far, and is expected to continue its good playing throughout the remainder of the season.

The team chose for its name "The Legionettes." The members of the team are Nancy Medford, Captain, Natalie Jones, Helen Coble, Anne Smith, Joan Medford, Daphne Bowers, Mary Grace Nance, Gloria Starnes, Marianna Young, Norma June Merrit, Norma King, Mae Higgins, Martha Gibbs, Kathy Laseter, Dot Dellinger, and Joan Gamble.

The officers of the Woman's Athletic Association are as follows: President, Dot Dellinger, Vice President, Natalie Jones, Secretary-Treasurer, Florence Bishop, Reporter, Mary Grace Nance.

The Chairmen of sports are: Volleyball, Ann Deas, Softball, Nancy Medford, Tennis, Betty "Peanut" Huff, Golf, Jane Wilson, Archery, Martha Bishop, Badminton, Martha Gibbs Outings, Martha Washam, Table Tennis, Daphne Bowers.
